*There are many ways to convey a narrative visually. Most often, intermedial transgressions are involved. To pay close attention to how an artist decides to present ideas that originate outside the frame, e.g., in literature, may provide further insights as to what is at stake. Nevertheless, the image as source of knowledge in itself must be considered. Using examples from the collection at Jönköping County Museum on display right now, this tour will raise questions regarding narration and intermediality focusing on the images.
